You're a good team worker with a strong technical capacity – so bring your talents to a new role with one of the area's leading employers. It's your chance to build your future at one of the UK's most successful ports.

It's a key role that's critical to our operations, because you'll be maintaining the cutting-edge equipment that we use to load and unload cargo.

You will have successfully completed an electrical engineering apprenticeship and/or extensive training courses, and will have an understanding of PLC control systems and AC/DC motor control drives. With proven experience in a heavy engineering environment, you'll ideally be qualified to 17th edition. A good head for heights is essential too, plus a full driving licence.

You should also bring a flexible approach to working hours, with the ability to commit to a range of shifts including regular weekends and overtime.

In return, you can look forward to opportunities to progress your career, along with an excellent range of benefits including pension, profit-related pay, subsidised canteen and 25 days' holiday a year.
